Today’s readings present different attitudes of faith experience in the characters they describe. In the First Reading, the future King David stops Abishai from killing Saul, despite their participation in armed conflict. In the Second Reading, Saint Paul moves us from the creation of Adam, the earthly man, to the creation of the heavenly man, the New Adam—Jesus, who gave up his life for us. According to Saint Paul, we are all called to be transformed into that heavenly reality. In the Gospel, Jesus transcends warlike practices by instructing his disciples to love their enemies, not to judge, and to never condemn others. This universal call to mercy is born out of the Father’s generosity, for the Father loves all of us alike, and welcomes the repentant sinner with open arms. Jesus presents us with a radical attitude that transcended the law of his time, but also our own contemporary attitudes. Is it not true that we still judge, condemn and reject others because they are not like us? Hold a small group discussion on the ways that this Gospel challenges our culture today.

The Office of Worship and the Office of Youth and Young Adult

Invites you to a Palm Burning Ice Cream Social
Tuesday, March 5, 2019
Following our 5:15pm Mass (5:45pm)
Crispin Hall

What to do with your palms for last year?
Bring your Palms from last year and place them in the baskets in the Sanctuary. The Palms that are burned this night will be used on Ash Wednesday. We gather as one in Mass, let us come together as one and build a strong, faith community in fellowship. See you there.
